There is the YTDigger iPhone app, which is a free Twitter-based video aggregation tool. It can aggregate videos from any website, including YouTube and Dailymotion. Although it can also aggregate videos from Twitter if you're okay with Twitter's rules, it does not aggregate photos from Twitter. It can also aggregate videos from other social networks like Facebook, Vimeo, Flickr, and Picasa. What makes this app different from other Twitter-based tools is that it also aggregates links, but only within a given range. So the app will only include a given number of videos and links within a given range. If someone doesn't have a Twitter account, this app is still a great alternative. Demo, Download, and Tutorials Download this application via iTunes or Google Play. It costs $1.99. There are no ads, but if you do use the app, you must be a Twitter user in order to be able to Tweet links and videos that you get from within the app. In order to achieve that, you must sign in with your Twitter credentials. After using the app

Cooler Master MasterComfort+ Introduction Almost all modern PCs feature high-quality sound systems, and it's only natural that these components come at a higher price. The manufacturer who handles design, sales, and support of high-end, high-tech products such as computers, monitors, PCs, and more is Cooler Master. Despite this, you can get many great products from Cooler Master at a fraction of the cost, and in this review, we're looking at a few of their compact chassis designed to boost your PC's sound. Cooler Master MasterComfort+ Heading into the Cooler Master lineup of chassis, the MasterComfort+ is the midrange of the range, as it's marketed as the most spacious of the three products in this group. However, as we'll discuss in this review, the MasterComfort+ will not be the best choice for heavy-duty audio systems. Instead, we're recommending the MasterComfort M-120 instead, which it's a fairly tight and simple chassis with a mild case design, and it offers a flexible layout for compact audio systems. Design and features The MasterComfort+ is a large chassis design, with dimensions of 21.1" x 9.1" x 13" (with the front door closed). It's more than 30% larger than a standard Macbook, and features a design intended to offer a lot of head room. The MasterComfort+ has a high-quality look and feel, with a smooth and durable ABS plastic build. The sides and top of the case are glossy black, while the bottom is matte white. Aside from the choice in colors and materials, the top of the case comes with two strips of glossy white rubber, which provide a positive grip for your laptop or PC to keep it centered over the cooling fans. Another thing about the rubber strips is that they are high-friction, which helps
