Endocrine dysfunctions including thyroid diseases are related to the development of thyroid cancer. The primary endocrine disorder associated with the development of thyroid cancer is hyperthyroidism, while the occurrence of hypothyroidism or hypothyroxinemia has been less often observed. On the other hand, TSHR antibodies, which are markers of autoimmune thyroid disease, may influence the treatment and prognosis of thyroid cancer. In this review, the significance of thyroid endocrinological screening and thyroid autoimmunity testing in the identification of patients at risk for thyroid cancer is discussed.Happy Independence Day! Happy 4th of July, everyone! I hope you had a safe and happy weekend. And if you're an American like me, I hope you had a fantastic week at work, at home and on the actual 4th of July! If you have been following my blog, I hope you've also been following the news about the Trump Administration moving forward with its plans to build the wall on the Mexican border. As an immigration lawyer, I have a stake in this issue, too. If you've been following the news, I hope you know that it will cost at least $20 billion to build the wall. I'm very curious to see what kind of pushback the Trump administration receives from the public and from other countries who will feel the effects of this wall. I think the country is pretty divided on this issue, but I do think that there are a lot of reasons to build the wall. 1. It's a long-needed border security policy. In the past, we had a wall between Mexico and the United States that was built to stop illegal border crossings. But that's been on and off for a long time, and is very ineffective at stopping crossings. I'm glad we finally had a full-on discussion about this. It's long past due, and I think the public deserves to know the reason behind this decision. I also think it's worth taking a moment to appreciate all the undocumented people who cross the border to make a better life for themselves and their families. It's an important
